SPORT NOTES

WILL RIDE IN

GRAND NATIONAL

He's little, but oh my! What he lacks in height and weight he makes up for in courage and pep and modesty and color. Pete Dangle is a multi-millionaire, and the greatest amateur jockey the United States has known since the days of Harry Stone, yet he likes to keep himself in the back-saddle and because the fact that he has never won anything much worth while. This illustrious athlete is a born rider, and has been sitting astride thoroughbreds most of the time since he was seven years old. Six years ago he took up polo and progressed so rapidly that he was a member of the United States International polo squad last summer. He did not make the team, but he was good enough to get a full picture of himself while participating in the matches between the United States and England. His running is around six goals, I believe.

For the past couple of months Pete has been riding in England, and meeting with great success. The climate of the Anglo-Saxon season over there is, as everyone knows, the Grand National, held annually at Aintree and considered one of the most difficult and dangerous races in the world. Dangle, who has already won five of six races abroad, will probably be astride Victor Emmanuel's Bangie II when the big race is run. Pete won one of his recent victories on Bangie II and a lot of his friends here would be well pleased that he surprised if this all-American combination came in first on the 27th.

The Grand National was first run in 1829. Few American-owned horses have won the historic, but Laddie Stanton's Sergeant Murphy won in 1925, and Charley Schwartz Jack Horner was first in 1926. In 1928 a very exciting situation developed out of 41 horses and riders that started, only three horses—and two riders—finished! When the last jump was reached, Tipper Tim, Billy Barton, the leading American entry, and the riders were about all over, but Billy Barton split and so lost the race although his rider remounted and finished second. Tipper Tim was a 100 to 1 shot, and another 100 to 1 shot, Greagahach, won in 1929. Shaun Collins finished first in 1930, with John Hay Whitney's Sir Lindsay third.

SUGGESTS REFEREE

STAY OFF THE ICE

Kitchener, Ont. Irvia Erb, manager of the Kitchener-Waterloo Senior and Intermediate Ontario Hockey association teams, has come forward with the most radical suggestion for improving the game which has been advanced in years. Erb would take the referee off the ice entirely and have him handle the game from the side line.

Sitting in a sound proof compartment, where the fans could throw neither epithets or pop bottles at him, the referee would be equipped with an electric bell and loud speaker, for a face off, the centre players would place the pucks between their sticks and hold that position until the referee called play under way.

Extra men on the ice show, up the game says Erb.

FIRST HOCKEY LEAGUE

Kingston's claim to the first organized hockey league in the world is pretty well established. A group of players, led by H. P. Thompson, of Kingston, gave a view of the Fete Dupont barracks. In the rear of which, on the harbor, the Royal Canadian Rifles played games from 1860 to 1865. Queen's University were the first champions of any organized league which played its games in front of the city hall.

A photo of a stick used in those days shows very little difference from the one of today. It is slightly more rounded at the base than the one of those days and was more like the field hockey stick. The game came to Kingston via the soldiers at Halifax, according to Montreal about the same time.

HEENEY VS RISCO

That Tom Heenev, New Zealand heavyweight, has accepted terms to box Johnny Risco of Cleveland in Toronto on April 6, was announced lately by Matchmaker Play Fair Brown of the Shamrock. A interest which had been aroused by the news that Risco was to appear there on the above date will be doubled by the statement that Heenev is to be his opponent.

JIMMIE McALANIN FIT AGAIN

"Kid" Chocolate, who is vacationing at his home in Cuba, expects to be in New York ready for engagements in May, while Juan Suarez, Argentine lightweight star will be back in the United States during the same month. Added to the return of the above pair is the announcement that Jimmy McAlarini out of the game since his bout with Petros on account of an injured hand, will return to New York about same time if prospects of a sufficiently lucrative bout are held out to him.

Stanley C. Wilson, Governor of Vermont says

THAT a man who does not speak well of his home town and its home State generally is not of much credit to either. There are always good things that can be said about our neighbors, where they live, and their ways of living, and if we will only remember that we are all neighbors and kin, the business of government will be much easier.

Not many years ago our neighborhood extended only so far as we could go, driving the old gray mare, and return in the same day. Today with the transportation and communication available, there is no limit to the neighborhood. We can travel thousands of miles in a day. We speak and our voices are heard on the other side of the world. These facts ought to bring us closer together and the imaginary lines that divide us should be disregarded.

We should be loyal to and speak well of the particular localities in which we live and should ever remember that our neighbors have homes that are just as dear to them as our homes are to us.

As our neighborhood has increased in size, there should be a corresponding improvement in the breadth of our understanding and appreciation.

PRODUCTIVE HOLSTEIN COW

Kingston, Ontario. The seven year old Holstein cow, Super Spotford Triumph, bred by W. E. Wood of Bloomfield, and now owned by P. M. Murray of Portsmouth, Ont., has just completed a year's record in the 365 day division of the N. O. P. on twice a day milking with a production of 16,573 lbs milk containing 75.25 lbs butter, giving her an average test of 9.65 per cent fat. This cow's best month production was 1,560 lbs milk containing 62.55 lbs fat.

HEARD ON THE STREET

Wife (to husband who has taken to nursing a pretty girl):

George dear, you'd make a beautiful nursemaid.

"Why?"

"You've always got your eye on the boys."

Wife: "A poor woman came to day to see her mother."

Daughter: "What did you give her?"

Wife: "That old suit you have set for ten years and the dress I bought last month."

"Two business men were chatting of domestic affairs. 'Tell me, are you troubled much in your neighborhood with borrowing?'"

"Yes, indeed. None of my neighbors seem to have what I want!"

Andy: "It is true that you're engaged to one of the prettiest girls in town."

Andy: "If it is."

Andy: "Well, how do you know them apart when you go courting?"

A certain aptologist found himself being a neat justice of the peace. A fine of five dollars was imposed, and drawing out his case, he saw two men on the dock.

"Here," said the clerk, "you've made a mistake sir, there's ten dollars on the dock."

"No mistake," said the motorman. "I'm going out on this town clock or this I can't see."

Ann: "Let's say: 'I don't know which is better, to have a pig just grunt when I describe a pain or claim he got one just like it.'"

Bridge Playing Wife (to delicate son clerk at 5:30 p.m.): "Give me something that's good to eat, quick and make it look as if I'd cooked it."

An itinerant collector of old iron was tramping his barrow along a very narrow road. Behind him was a somewhat elderly motor, the impatient driver of which was booting and tooting in his anxiety to pass the old man before.

The old man merchant looks around at the car, and then addressed the owner: "All right, governor, I'll call for that tomorrow."

Herb Ellis: "I have no luck with women."

Carl Brown: "Lucky fellow."

Dinner (after glancing at check): "There is a beauty parlor next door, isn't there?"

Waitress: "A lady runs a place for reducing figures, sir?"

Guest: "Then I'd be obliged to you if you'd have her work on this dinner check before I pay it."

"Is the pleasure of the next day to be mine?" asked the persistent beau of a girl who was anxious to avoid him.

"Yes, entirely," she replied.

An orator, warning to his clerk, took off his coat, which rather disconcerted one of the stewards of the meeting, who thought that a reporter would make a sensation out of the incident.

Toward the close, he said to the speaker, "I don't suppose you know, when you removed your coat, that a newspaper man was next?"

"Yes, I did," was the reply. "I kept my eye on the coat all the time."

A young bride walked into a drug store and approached a clerk timidly.

"The baby tonic you advertised—she began—" "Does it really make babies bigger and stronger?"

"We sell a lot of it," replied the druggist, "and we've never had a complaint."

"Well, I'll take a bottle," said the bride after a moment and went out.

In five minutes she was back. She got the druggist into a corner and whispered into his ear:

"I forgot to ask about this baby tonic," she said under her breath. "Who takes it, me or my husband?"

Hub: "I can't tell this stuff."

Young bride: "Never mind dear, I have some lovely recipes for making up leftovers."

Hub: "In that case I'll eat it now."

The pupil had handed in his composition with a long string of dots and dashes at the end of it.

"What are those marks for?" asked the teacher.

"Oh, those are the punctuation marks," replied the boy. "Put them in to suit yourself."

THE HOG MARKET FOR GRAIN

There is considerable interest for farmers in a statement recently prepared by Canadian authorities from Canadian conditions as to the acre value of the three principal grain crops, wheat, barley, and oats when fed to hogs.

The factors for consideration are the price of hogs, the amount of grain fed to produce a pound of pork, and the acre yield of the grain concerned. It is found that when 400 lbs of grain are fed to produce 100 lbs of hog the per acre value of the grain is:

With Wheat Barley Oat

BRITISH GOVERNMENT REGULATIONS HANDICAP CATTLE SHIPMENTS

The Winnipeg Free Press says:

If there is one point on which everyone is agreed, it is that the Government has agreed in connection with the bringing about of better times it is that the export market for Canadian cattle is greatly enlarged. The various proposals that are being made in the interests of the cattle industry are of the nature of those that when production has been in depressed markets will be found in which the surplus will be sold at a profit in the more active and more profitable markets Canada's agricultural output would back up on the basis of the more productive activities of the country.

Importance and one involving Government action, and this action, seemingly, the Government of Canada took with the new British shipping regulations were announced. The regulations are of the nature of those that are left unchanged for the present. So far, however, according to the information received, still, the Government has agreed to the British Government has agreed to this request.

The regulations have been brought out very clearly, first, that facilitating the export of Canadian produce is a paramount concern of the Dominion Government. Canada's interest in Great Britain, evidently, is that Great Britain can get along with the regulations as to ship fittings.

Consequently the question arises regarding Canadian cattle on the U.S. market. The U.S. interest at this time. From 1922 to 1923 the average yearly export of Canadian cattle to the U.S. was 423 head. In 1924 the number exported was 25,234. The drop is large, but the drop is not the part of the question. The question is whether there will be some 75,000 head of cattle to market from the three provinces in 1925. In the first few months and with the United States now closed to Canadian cattle the question arises as to where the cattle will go.

In 1923 the British embargo against Canadian cattle was removed. The conditions imposed on Canadian cattle by the British Government were fairly rigorous. Canada is now free to export to Great Britain—190,848 is the number given for 1922, dropping down to a few hundred in 1923, rising to 5,653 in 1924.

It seems to be equivalent to an embargo, making the export of Canadian cattle to Great Britain a risky proposition, but it is not a prohibitive level. The available ocean space in sight of the Canadian cattle is the North Atlantic, and in 1924, as now and July 1, is regarded as an inadequate to the possibility of Canadian shipment.

It is not clear whether it is unable to induce some change which will obtain better shipping positions for Canadian cattle. The cattle production will be in serious jeopardy through the difficulties of getting the animals to the overseas market.

In imposing their shipping regulation may feel pretty justified in imposing their shipping regulation. The meat fees justified in imposing embargoes, dump duties, restricts discounts, and other devices to the Canadian market. It is not Canada, presumably in the interests of the Canadian people. But it is the Canadian people who are on the export cattle trade at this

At the beginning of this year, however, the British Government announced that it intended to prohibit any species that deck fittings on cattle-carrying ships shall be of iron or steel. The fittings shall be of elm or some similar wood. Installing such fittings, according to the new regulations, is not only a costly and time-consuming process, but also, outside of one or two of the few steamers which happened to have such fittings on board, it is considered doubtful by some of the cattlemen if any of the other lines will erect cattle-carrying ships with Canadian cattle on board. The new Canadian cattle board ship has been very small, and is a view of false cost, cattle-owners are not inclined to believe. It has been drawn that the new British shipping regulations have been too strict, and that the Canadian shipping companies of Canadian cattle.

If the situation actually exists as it is outlined above, what is the position of the Western farmer who hopes to improve his own and his country's condition by raising a few head of cattle for export? Obviously this is a matter of vital

"DONNA MYNE"

By LUCIE LAWRENCE

She took Donna's arm and led her to a small desk by a window. "I am the senior clerk in this office, and I will be the one who will give you your work. By the way, what is your name?"

"Just Donna to you and my friends. If there are others, they all have to call me Miss Mynor."

Peggy smiled gaily at her. She led this girl very much.

"Well here's hoping we will be good friends. I guess I'd better go say now. Mr Norton is due to arrive any minute."

She left Donna's desk, and walked to her own, which was not far from the latter.

When her date, George, slipped back at him, and entered halfway, Peggy introduced her tall girls. Some seemed to be friendly, but several were cold and snide. However, Donna did not mind that day was only the beginning of Donna's business career as a college girl. She was always on time, the very best of work. When she was not in the office, she was at most of the office force. Several of the girls were jealous and often showed it, but because cold and distant in their attitude toward her, Donna realized that couldn't help being that way, so she did not worry about it. Larry always had a pleasant smile, and sometimes a cheery word for her every day. Their relationship was a fair story. Larry

Mr Norton. How her heart melted at the sight of him! His was ideal, and she knew she loved him. She loved him with a true, evering love that meant life itself for her. Often when thinking of her would rebuke herself, for her in his arms, she felt the thrill of sympathetic friendship. One night, just after she had finished her day's work, and had left office, she felt a detaining hand on her shoulder. Even before she was aware of it, she knew it was the grass, and ran into the stall with her tender kiss still on her lips. Donna had to let her go at that point, as it was time to get up at its bell. Although she never told her that it was the first time she could not stand to be kissed, she could not stand to be kissed any more. The officer girls no longer were happy and it was not happiness, but sad and sad. They did not know and she never saw what the officers of the office, Peggy Brown, had done. She was married in love, and it was hard for her to guess what the young man had done. Donna walked down the stairs of one of those lovely houses in the city, and she saw the officer girls with their work in the windows and in the air. Last night, she was with her, and Mrs Norton was still and praying that she would awaken soon.

"Harry," she whispered.

"My little sweetheart, Donna, dear," he said, gathering her up in his arms, "What a fright you gave me tonight! I thought that I might lose you, and you have never even told me that you were so afraid. I really be pressed his lips to hers.

"With her one little hand, Donna said, "I am not afraid."

"Harry, don't please," she said, as memory of that woman, who had been with her in the car, came back to her.

"But, Sweetheart?"

"Don't please," she became conscious of another's presence in the room and her eyes met those of a man who was standing in the doorway. It was with her, Harry at that time.
